Opportunity Fund

Missouri Foundation for Health (MFH) invites organizations to submit concept papers for systems change projects that will positively impact the health of Missourians. We are interested in ideas that explore or implement community-driven ways to challenge and disrupt these systems that allow and perpetuate inequities in health status and outcomes for individuals, families, and communities.

MFH defines systems change as follows:

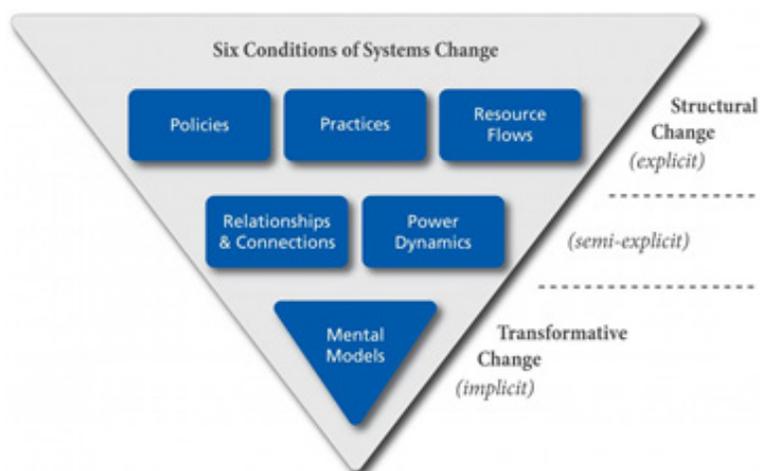

Systems change involves addressing the root causes that hold social problems in place. This intentional process focuses on transforming and disrupting the deeply embedded systems and structures that enable the status quo.

The figure below highlights some of the common components of systems that can be targeted by systems change work:

Based on our experience with Opportunity Fund, successful projects often include one or more of the following elements:

- Strategic: Develops internal or sector-wide planning and preparation effort focused on systems change
- Far-reaching: Creates or builds on existing collaborative networks and has implications beyond a single organization's client base
- Community-led: Generates solutions that engage those negatively impacted by the given system
- Connected: Fits within the broader landscape of what the field is doing to address the systems-level issue
- Responsive: Addresses an issue that has recently surfaced in the environment with a systems approach
- Innovative: Tests unconventional approaches to disrupt systems
